Translation

1. This is tale of two brothers. One of them had seven sons, the other had seven daughters. One day, they were sitting under the sun. The one with seven sons told the one who had seven daughters 'Let's go, father of seven daughters!' The father of seven daughters came back. He took the eldest daughter and beat her. The daughter said, 'Father, why are you beating me?' What is my sin that you beat me? He said it's because of your uncle. He called me the father of seven daughters. I beat you on account of these words. She said, 'No father, don't do this! Go say to my uncle this: you, your eldest son and me, my eldest daughter. Let's send them out for three four months and see what happens.'
2. The daughter had a horse. She brought her horse, saddled it. She put manly clothes on, etc. The boy too, pulled out his horse. They mounted and went away. They went on a road. They arrived at a fork in the road; one way was the way of righteousness; the other was the road of evil. The girl said, 'Oh cousin, you take the road of righteousness; it doesn't matter! You're young!' I will take the road of evil.' It doesn't matter, I will take this road of evil.'
3. The girl came from the way of evil. She came to the city. She took her horse, and sell it in the bazaar. She went to the blacksmiths. She shouted 'Is there anyone needing a worker? is there anyone needing a baker? I know everything. Kawa the blacksmith didn't have a worker. He shouted and said, 'Come here, I need a worker.' Kawa the blacksmith made her his worker. He said, 'Come, work here as long has you want. Whenever you want to leave, I will give you extra money.'
4. They worked for a couple of days. One day Kawa looked at her wrist. The woman's wrist is small. He said, 'Mother, my worker has small wrist; I suspect that he is actually a girl.' The mother said, 'Oh child, tomorrow is Friday. Go with him to the river, and swim there. You may know if he is indeed a girl.' They had a puppy who could understand the language of humans. On Friday evening the puppy came to the girl. The puppy said, 'Kawa wants to know if you are a girl.' When you go to the river to swim tell him that you're weak and that you can't swim in that river.' I will go pour some water on me on that corner. Don't swim; let your girlhood be not known.'

5. They went to the edge of the river. They wanted to swim. Kawa said, 'Come so that we swim in this water.' The girl said, 'I can't; I'm weak. I can't swim in this water.' I go in that corner pour some water on me; I will be back.' The worker went away. It's not my business if she poured some water on herself in that corner. They came back and worked for a while. Kawa said, 'I Keep doubting that my worker is a girl.' His mother said, 'Child, there is a bouquet of flower. I will buy it. If a girl puts that bouquet under herself... If a girl sleeps on it doesn't rot; if a boy sleep on it it rots.' I shall go tomorrow buy the bouquet of flower in the street.'
6. The mother bought the bouquet of flower and brought it. In the evening the girl came back. The puppy went and made her understood. It said, 'They want to know you're a girl in this manner.' If you sleep on the mattress the flower doesn't rot; and they know you're a girl.' Don't sleep on the mattress at night. Turn yourself around.' Put yourself to the side; the flower will rot. The mother said, 'Child, it is a boy, not a girl'. The girl worked at Kawa's for a while. One day she said, 'Kawa'. 'Yes', he replied. She said, 'I've worked enough. As for my salary it's up to you. Kawa came back home and from what had he gave her a lot; he didn't give her less money.' The girl went to the street; She bought a horse; she bought a beautiful set of cloth. They had a deal with her cousin to meet each other at certain time in a certain place.
7. The girl went to that road. There was no trace of the cousin there. She said, 'I shall ride my horse [lit. hit my foot at the horse] and go to the city, see what my cousin is up to?' She came and saw that her cousin was sitting hopeless by a wall. She said, 'Oh cousin, why aren't you coming back' He said, 'I have nothing; how could I come back' He said, 'Come, I give you money; buy a horse.' I give you money; buy a set of clothes. Let's go back together.' She gave him money; he bought a set of clothes. She gave him money; he bought a horse. They mounted on their horses and set off. The came back. The girl went to his father's. The boy went to his father's
8. three, four days passed on it. On day she said, 'Father, tell my uncle to send us back our horse' Tell him to send me back the set of clothes too.' My cousin, it was me who gave him money so that he buys that horse and a set of clothes. It doesn't matter if one is a boy or a girl. It is up to courage.' The brother said to him (the other brother). He brought the horse for him. Kawa said, 'I shall go after this worker of mine; She is a girl' I shall go after her.' The puppy who gave her advice knew that she was a girl; otherwise, they would know she was a girl.
9. Kawa said, 'I shall go after her and become a peddler.' He became peddler. One day the girl saw that Kawa had things like ring, comb, etc in his hand. She said, 'Oh Kawa, what are you doing here?' Kawa said, 'if you want the truth, I have come after you!' She said, 'Come, let's go home.' She took him home. They sat at home. Her father gets her married to Kawa. He gave her to him. Kawa took her and went. A bouquet of flower, a bouquet of narcissus, may I never see your death.
