Translation

1. A long time ago there was a king who had a kingdom in a country. The king had a beautiful girl, whom he was looking to get married. Although very beautiful, the princess had a lot of pride and bad attitude. The king said to himself 'I will marry off my daughter, she will mend her ways'. But the princess didn't think so, she was mean to whoever courting her
2. She would find a fault in him, she would mock him. One day, some nobles came to the palace together with the king in order that the princess would choose one of them. However, as usual the daughter would find fault in them. Look at this one; he is round as tub! This one is fat! This one is tall as ladder! This one is short and fat!
3. as usual the daughter would find fault in them. The princess would mock and find fault in anyone who came to court her. The king was wise and great and didn't say anything to her until when her daughter mocked a very nice noble. She mocked him. She said I should call him the King Grisly Beard
4. The king father said 'You will be married off to whoever enters this door'. The king father said 'You will be married off to whoever enters this door'. You should get married to whomever enters this door. Be it a beggar or a prince, you should get married to that person. A few days passed by. One day a fiddler entered the palace. The king reached his wish. The princess should get married to the fiddler. The fiddler came to the palace yard and started to play flute
5. He asked for money from the people in the palace. He asked for money from the people in the palace. The king ordered to the guards 'Go bring the fiddler here'. According to his previous command the princess should get married to the princess. The fiddler was surprised, and said 'What's going on!' But he was very happy inside him. The girl started to cry; she begged her father.
6. The father kept his word and said 'Whatever I say should happen. You should get married to the fiddler'. The king threw a party for them and said to them 'you should leave'. He said to her daughter 'You should go to a trip with your husband'. The fiddler took the princess and they left the palace. They should have headed towards what was expecting them.
7. Their travel was long and hard. After a few days they reached a beautiful forest. The princess asked the fiddler 'whome does this forest belong to?' The fiddler said 'This belongs to the King Grisly Beard'. The girl touched her wrist and said 'what a fool I am'. They continued their journey and reached a big meadows. The princess asked her husband 'whome does this meadows belong to?' The fiddler said 'This belongs to the King Grisly Beard'. The girl hit herself on the top of her head and said 'What a fool I am'. They continued their journey and reached a big beautiful city
8. The princess asked her husband 'whome does this city belong to? It's beautiful' The fiddler said 'This belongs to the King Grisly Beard'. The girl hit herself on the top of her head and said 'What a fool I am... why did I find so much fault with him! The fiddler told him 'why do you keep repeating this! I am bad for you?'
9. Haven't I been nice with you?' But the girl didn't respond. She was angry. They continued their way and left the city. They went to the edge of the city and arrived at an old cottage. The princess told her husband 'What have you got in this cottage? Have you got servants and workers?' Her husband told her 'There aren't any servants around... here we should do everything ourselves' They went inside the cabin. There was some food there. However, after few days the food was over

10. They started cooking food. As the princess couldn't cook her husband would help her in cooking. Afterwards, the husband went out. He went on a tree. He found a willow tree, and cut some willows from it. He brought the willows and put them in front of his wife. He said 'You should weave baskets from these'. He put them in front of his wife.
11. The princess started to weave baskets but she hurt her finger. The fiddler moaned in anger, and said 'you don't know anything; what is this? You are not able to cook food; you cannot weave baskets' look whom I got married to... You are good for nothing. I should do something with you'. He pondered and said 'what should I do?'
12. He started to make some pots with mud. He made some pots and gave them to his wife for she sell them. As her wife was beautiful, people would come and buy pots from him. She would sell more pots everyday. One day, she took many pots to the side of the road to sell. Suddenly, a rider passed by, striking her pots. He destroyed all her pots. He left her and went away.
13. Upon seeing her broken pots the princess started to cry. She said to herself 'What should I say to my husband now?' Shall I say that all the pots and pans were destroyed?' She rose and quickly went home to tell her husband. As he heard the story, the husband moaned in anger. He said 'How stupid you are! Why did you put all those pots at the edge of the road? You couldn't do this job either!'
14. I went inside the palace yesterday to see if they need a maid' They accepted and said 'no problem! We need a servant to work at the kitchen. Tell her to come' The princess went inside the palace. There, they made her do all the hard work.
15. At the end of the day, they would give her some meat, which she would bring home. She would take it with her. A few months passed by like this. One day the princess heard that the elder son of the king is about to get married' All the servants in the kitchen were happy but the princess was sad. A few days passed by until the wedding day arrived. The princess was watching people from behind the window.
16. She said to herself 'Only if I was a little bit wiser, and I was not in bad attitude now It was me who would get married to this king! What a big mistake I committed!' At this point the King Grisly Beard heard her and said 'Did you say my name?' The girl said 'No, please forgive me! I didn't want you to see me like this!' The King Grisly Beard said to her 'Come! Come! let's go! I'm not alone! Let's go to the ceremony'
17. When they entered the ceremony, the princess saw that all the nobles, and even her father was there. As soon as they saw her, they started laughing at her; they mocked her. They said 'Look at her clothes and such' The prince said to her husband 'excuse me, I did wrong' The King Grisly Beard told her 'no worries! I'm the same fiddler who came to your palace!'
18. I was the rider who passed by and destroyed the pots. I did all these things for you to understand your mistake and to realize that pride is a bad thing'. The King Grisly Beard said to her 'now that this is the case, come get married to me, may we have a good life together' They got married the same night and lived together for the years to come.
